The Trouble with Fascism, Free Speech, and Identity in the Age of Trump

The recent Presidential election was by all accounts the most divisive in recent memory. Among the divisions on display was a recurring opposition between the so-called "white working class" and oppressed social groups including immigrants and non-white Americans. Those divisions increasingly unfold as conflicts between the Alt-Right and its enemies on University campuses beneath the signs of free speech. This talk will illumine those conflicts by asking what we mean when we say "free speech" today as well as what lies beneath debates concerning free speech historically.
