INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS AND POLITICS

Professor Luis Eduardo Zavala de Alba

Yale University
Summer Session
B
June 29th - July 31st, 2020

Subject area: Political Science

Description

The protection of human rights is generally recognized to be a fundamental aim of modern international law and politics. Consideration of Human Rights issues has reached into all organs and bodies of the United Nations. This course develops a coherent theory and practice of the international human rights bodies and their implications in international politics but as well the so-called Governance in Human Rights.

The nationalistic, xenophobic, misogynistic, and explicitly anti-human rights agenda of many populist political leaders requires human rights proponents to rethink many longstanding assumptions. There is a need to re-evaluate strategies and public policies, while reaffirming the basic principles on which the human rights movement is founded. The innovative nature of international human rights procedures may account for the long-standing incoherence and inconsistency. The most significant factors, however, are likely to be the sudden development and unprecedented nature of international human rights law, remedies, and public policy in human rights, varying from domestic legal systems, and the different views of judges and committee members about the role of international bodies in affording relief to victims of state abuse.

Moreover, international human rights law and politics is the first area of international law where individuals may bring actions against states in international tribunals, but the imbalance in respective power and juridical status between states and individuals affects the procedures and the perceived role of the human rights institutions in affording remedies and implementing public policies at international level. There is a need for collaboration with a broader range of actors, to be more persuasive and less didactic, and to be prepared to break with some of the old certainties. Academics should pay attention to the unintended consequences of their scholarship, and everyone in the human rights movement needs to reflect on the contributions each can make.

For the reasons provided above, understanding the nature, mechanisms and logic of human rights governance in international law and politics, the way they emerged and how they are exercised is the main goal of the present course. The students will take part in an academic trip to New York in order to have meetings with public international servants at the UN Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights and human rights defenders from Human Rights Watch Headquarters at the Empire State Building.

Bibliography:

Format of the course

Students are expected to do the readings assigned in the handbook before the class. During the sessions, the professor will act as a guide through the discussion of the topics based on the readings, as well as on personal experiences and opinions of all the students.

Assessment

Grading will be provided by two main evaluations:
- Midterm exam about the contents of the course, including the readings and discussions in class.
- Final Project: A paper about 15-20 pages shall be handed out. The professor will give instructions during the course.

Plagiarism

All students will be expected to follow the common policy about the correct use of sources and data. They will be required to cite all quotes and paraphrases in their written production based on MLA or APA style, as well as recognize intellectual property and ideas from other authors during their oral participation in class.

All the material provided during the course will be correctly cited.
