Yale Summer Session B
S178: Introduction to Political Philosophy

July 1 - August 2, 2024

Instructor: Professor Paul Franks, paul.franks@yale.edu

Short Description: Political philosophy deals with foundational questions about how we humans should organize our collective agency. Should we have hereditary rulers or elected leaders? What, if anything, makes the difference between a legitimate state and a protection racket? When do we have an obligation to obey the state, and when is revolt or revolution permissible or even obligatory? What are the meanings and comparative values of freedom and equality, which often seem to conflict? What is identity politics, and how are biology and political identity related? Readings include selections from the works of Plato, Aristotle, Hobbes, Kant, Marx and Mill, as well as recent and contemporary philosophers such as Rawls, Foucault, Cohen, Scanlon, and Anderson. Students will be introduced to central problems, concepts, and texts of political philosophy, and – most importantly of all – they will be introduced to methods of critical thinking and debate.

Units: (readings will be available on Canvas)

1. Ideal Systems and Utopias
2. Non-Ideal Systems and Protection Rackets
3. Freedom
4. Equality
5. Identity and Biology

Office Hours: I'm available in the hour after class or by appointment. I am always happy to meet. Please don’t hesitate to arrange by email a time to talk.

Coursework: Each week you will have a writing assignment, to be submitted by email.

  Final version due, Fri 8/2

I will provide questions for each writing assignment at the beginning of each week.

Evaluation: Assignments will be graded as follows:

- Reading Responses: 3 x 10% each = 30%
- Mid-term Essay: 20%
- Final Essay: 30%
- Participation in Class Discussion: 20%
Attendance: Since this is a condensed course, attendance is mandatory. Failure to attend every class will impact your participation and thus your final class grade. If you have any questions or concerns, please contact me.

Participation: Class participation makes up 20% of your grade. Some of you will be eager to ask questions and discuss your thoughts on issues. Others will be less ready to speak in class. I understand and respect these differences. It is also possible to participate via email or in office hours.

I expect that you come to class having already prepared the readings. If you do not understand everything, that is fine! But you should prepare questions about what you do not understand. I expect that you are attentive in class, that you ask questions both inside and outside of class if you have any, and that you encourage and engage your fellow classmates in discussion. If you have any concerns about participation, please speak to me early on.

Academic Integrity: I take any suspected cases of plagiarism seriously, so please remember to cite any and all ideas that are not your own. Consult the Yale policies on academic integrity and ask me if you are unsure about the rules.

Reading Assignments: All readings will be available electronically on Canvas and must be read in preparation for class.
